

If I Was a Country

By Alivea

If I was a country, I would be called Aliveosa

because I float in space.

I would have coral reefs, mushrooms, and many stars.

My plants would be healthy, and my landmarks would be huge.

In my country there would be space to grow and improve.

We would learn, explore,

and we would expand our territory.

To eradicate sea monsters, we would throw them into space.

I would throw celebrations for many reasons, big or small,

without much planning so we could go with the flow.

My borders would be my Ocean, so we would have the advantage.

The people of my planet would love to learn.

If I was a country, my people would love it when it rains into the heavy space air.

My flag would be made of sand because it supports us all but is always changing, like us,

Quotes of my favorite jokes would be my anthem for a happy vibe.

I would encourage people to explore their interests.

And I would encourage learning, but not force people to interact in ways that are not their own.

But I am not a not a country -

I am a small planet.

All life on my planet is thriving and my leaders are kind.

With my leaders, I do not stand alone.

I stand with my allies, fighting for freedom.

Exploring what is hidden, to make it known.
