The poem has 4 stanzas.
The poetry uses repetition.
My poem reads smoothly, like music with rhythm.
The poem informs the reader about real and imagined things that a fossil hunter might see .
The poem informs the reader about real and imagined things that a fossil hunter might hear .
The poem informs the reader about real and imagined things that a fossil hunter might feel .
The poem informs the reader about real and imagined things that a fossil hunter might know .
I use comparisons (similes and metaphors) or other types of figurative language (onomatopoeia) in my poem.

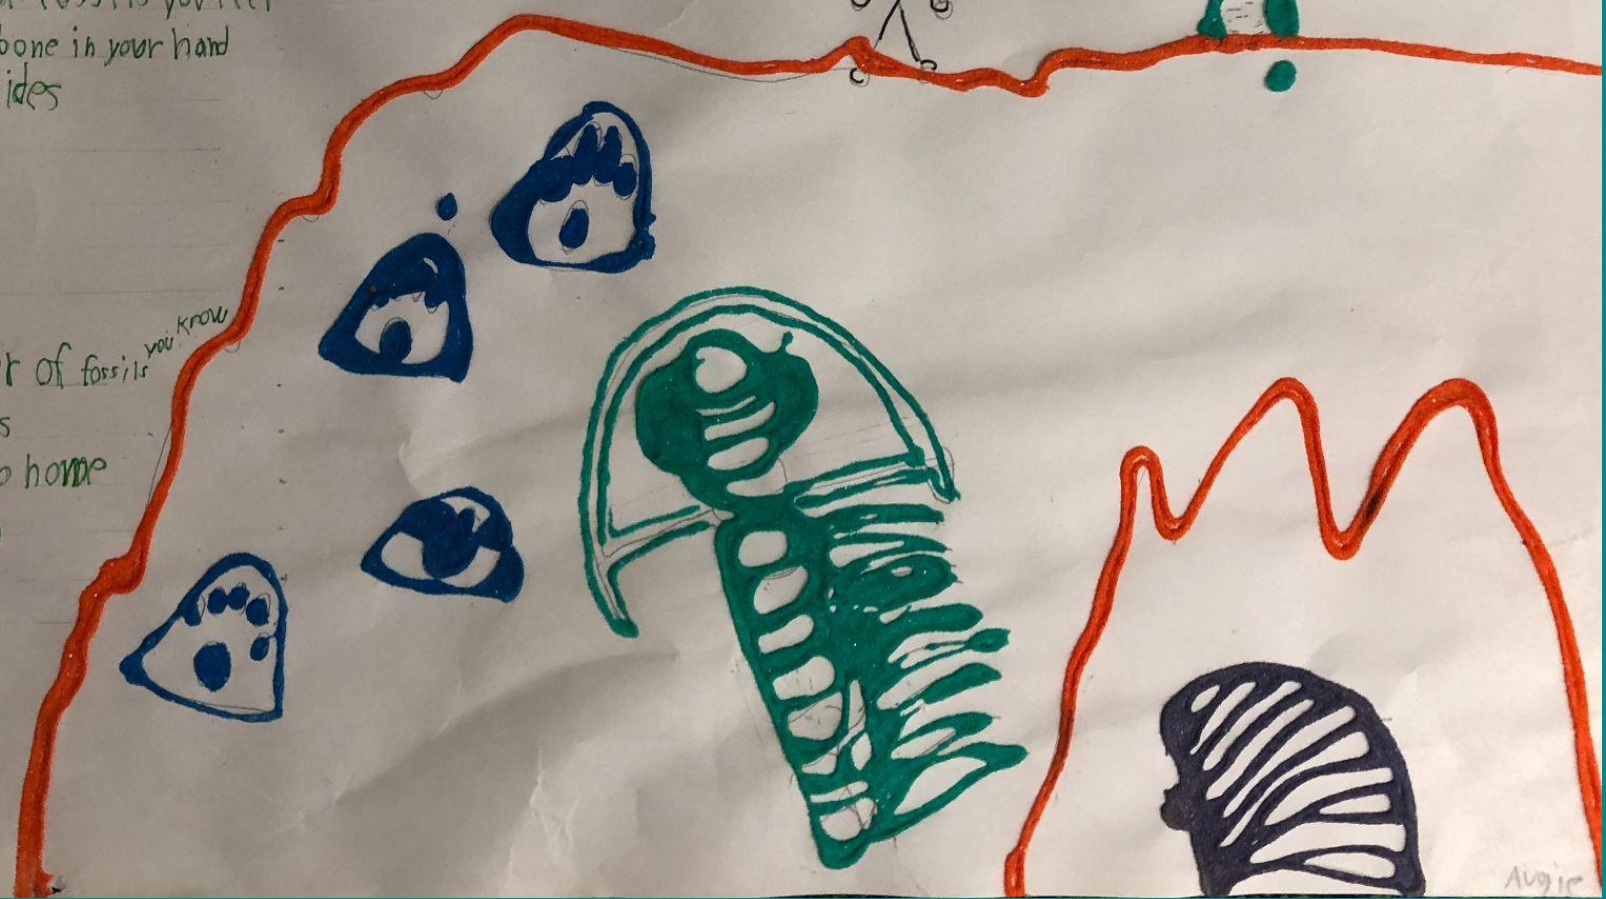

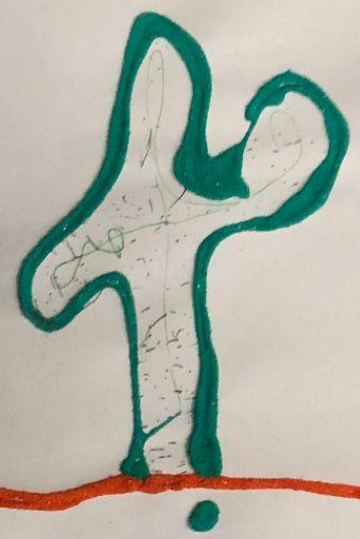

Fossil Hunter

If you are the hunter of fossils you see you see ravines
you see dark earth
you see brachiopods
you see lizards

If you are the hunter of fossils you hear
You hear boom boom of the hammer hitting the rock
You hear water flowing
You hear chirp chirp of the birds
You hear whoosh of the wind

If you are the hunter of fossils you feel
You feel a rhinoceros bone in your hand
You feel the pull of tides
You feel dry sand
You feel the wind

If you are the hunter of fossils ^{you know}
You know types of fossils
You know how it is to go home
You know where to dig

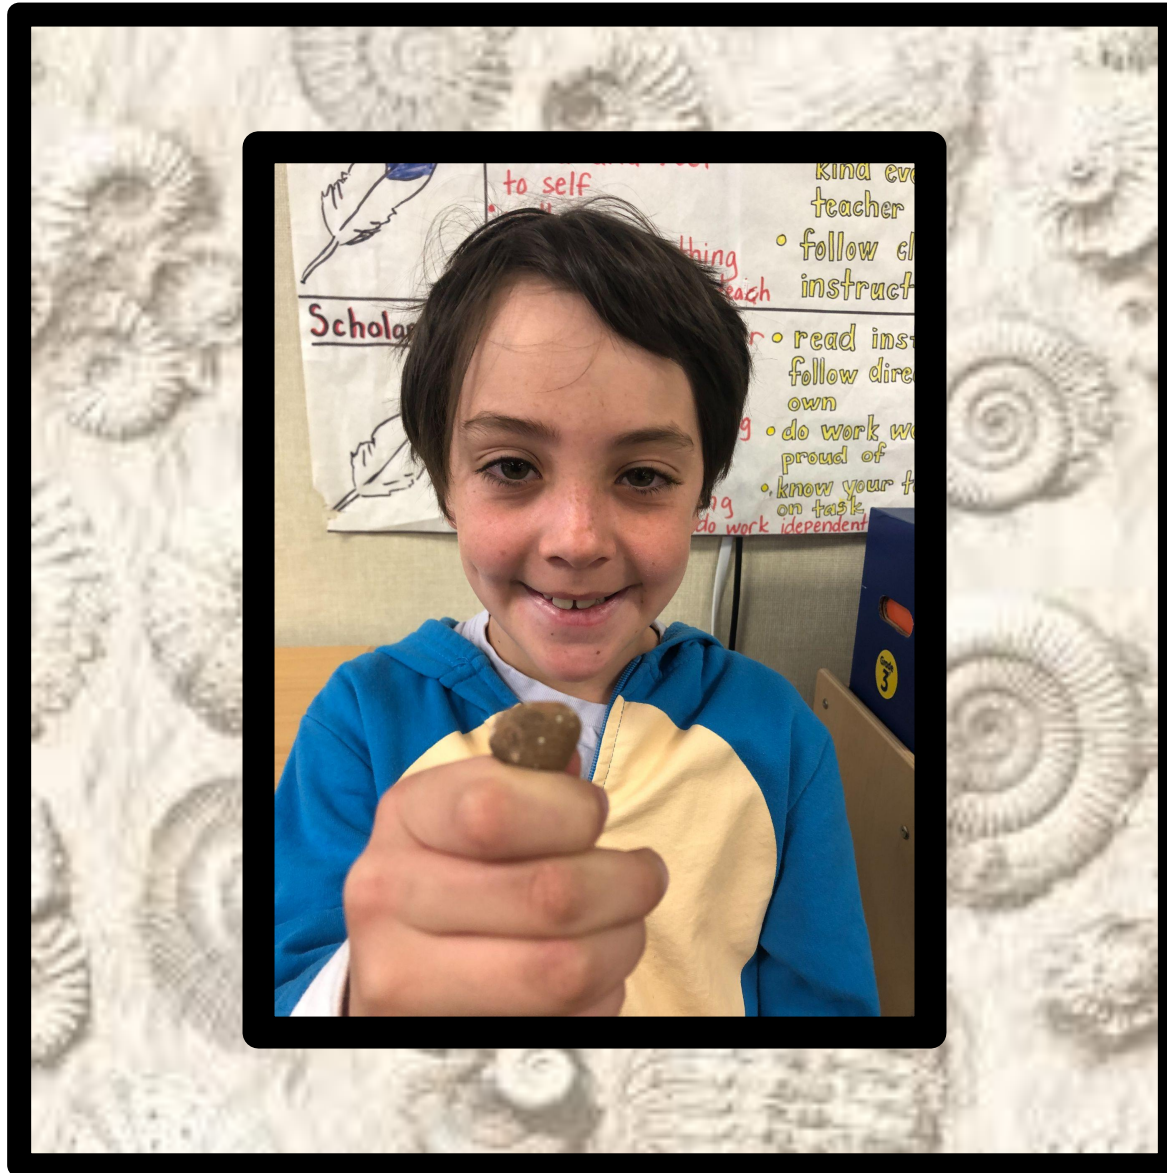

Fossils Tell of Earth Long Ago

If You Are The Hunter of Fossils.

If you are the hunter of fossils you feel you feel the brush go swish swish on your hand you feel the handle on your hand.

You feel ammonite curled in your hand

You feel impatient for sleep

If you are the hunter of fossils
you hear

You hear crackling

You hear phew, shhh of the wind

You hear birds chirp chirp

You hear tink of the chisel

If you are the hunter you know

You know how to handle a pick

You know earth's history

You know how the day always ends

If you are the hunter of fossils you see.
You see meteors

You see dust devils

You see dark earth
